Introductions

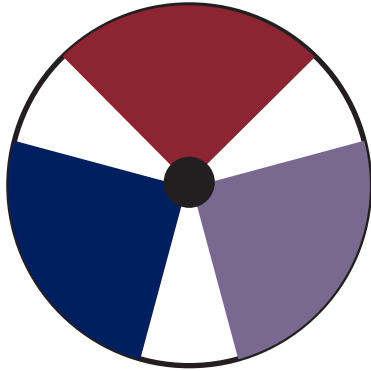

1. What's your biggest insecurity?
2. What did you want to be growing up?

September

August Recap

It's the government's responsibility to balance society's power, and our government allows the people to carry some of that responsibility with representation.

Power

September

Types of Power

Active Power: A power that can rule.

Passive Power: A power that decides.

September

What are the main powers in our government?

1. Executive (President)

Functions as the CEO facilitating the will of the other powers while also providing guidance. Wields the union's power to represent the country to the world.

2. State (Senate)

Represents the state. Main check on federal power.

Treaty making, advise and consent, political appointment.

3. People (House)

Represents the people. Check on both Federal and State power.

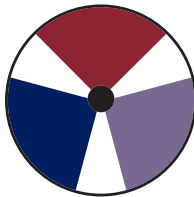

Writes the laws, power of the purse and war powers. Accountability equals adaptability.

4. Judiciary (Supreme Court) (Passive power) Oversight between the three active powers.

Help Wanted!

Looking for thinkers.

1. Looking for Political Theorist and people interested in learning more about political theory.
 2. Our objective is to have a conversation with people in our community.
- About: Government, Power, and Representation
- We want to talk about how our government's job is to balance power and it's the people's responsibility to balance that power through our representation.
3. Group meets once a month with the goal to build a committed community to foster new ideas into functional discourse.
 4. Our core structure is built around Republican government and capitalism, which puts power as close to people as possible allowing them to build, and live a life they see fit.
 5. Our political objective is to be influential in promoting policy to increase and expand representation in the House.
 6. Chapter leaders must be ready to work.
 7. Chapter members are encouraged to casually read, listen, and share their perspective.
 8. Compensation is a balanced government and economy where we can thrive.

Help Wanted!

Looking for thinkers.

1. Do you also think our country is headed in the wrong direction?
2. Do you think our leaders can't see it? Or worse, our leaders do, but don't care?
3. Does the partisan bickering, our team against their team, disgust you?
4. Do you feel frustrated that nothing gets done?
6. What if I told you we've had these exact problems before?
7. What if I told you good people can fix these problems when we work together?
8. What if I told you the system is fine, it's just the people running the system who are the problem?
9. We can study history, identify our country's flaws, and come together to repair our republic.

Join us in the Madisonian Republicans.
